Mr, Hughes and friends,

First of all I must, having perused your website, caution you against taking such a cavalier attitude toward evil and its many manifestations. You may think this sort of thing is quite amusing, and I admit I've been known to enjoy a good Edgar Allan Poe story myself. But it is slippery slope down from the world of the creative imagination to the pitfalls of the real world, where Satan lurks, waiting the trap the unwary soul. Making light of these events not only mocks the feelings of the victim's loved ones, it is a dangerous offense in the eyes of the Lord.

I was fortunate enough to visit Candell County, Ohio, last winter and to speak to the faithful at the invitation of the Reverend Rob Sage at the Blood of the Lamb Worship Center. My brothers and sisters in Christ there at the Center were clearly concerned about what they see going on in their community. I did not have to look around long to share their concern. I saw numerous teens dressed in "gothic" black clothing or donning the symbol-laden garb of heavy metal and rap-metal artists. I saw them marring the beautiful faces and bodies the Lord gave them with obscene tattoos and piercings. Signs of alcohol and drug and sexual addiction were all around. The young people I spoke too at the worship center said that many of their peers were likewise addicted to bloody movies, violent video games, and Internet pornography. Stories of killed and maimed animals led me to expect the worst, and I found it: throughout Candell County, on railway trestles and highway overpasses—sometimes even on the very walls of the school buildings themselves—I found graffiti that indicated several Satanic Cults active in the area.

As an expert in the twisted world of Satanic Cults, I have seen this happen over and over again. It was not difficult to predict, as I did then, that Candell County was heading for a tragedy. And so now it has come to pass. But Candell County is not alone. The terrible, terrible thing that happened to little Sarah Dempsey is happening all over America even as we speak. There are not just hundreds, but thousands, of cases of Satanic Ritual Abuse uncovered in our country every year. Most of them do not go reported as such, because police and prosecutors choose to ignore the reality. They are too vainglorious in their modern police methods to take note of the obvious clues right before their eyes. When you combine these thousands of misreported causes with the countless others that undoubtedly go unreported, I think it is fair to say the spiritual health of our country is in grave and horrible danger.

The faithful of Candell County need to hold the County Sheriff accountable for how he conducts his investigation into the kidnapping, ritual torture, and sacrifice of Stephanie Dempsey. This was not an isolated incident or the work of a single deranged individual. The priests of the Satanic Cult responsible for her death must be brought to justice. Like most secular authorities, the sheriff will probably be more than happy to sweep the truth of what is going on under the rug and blame anyone he can for this crime. We must pray and we must fight to keep him from doing so. Perhaps if we are successful in Candell County, we will turn the tide across this great nation and put an end to these abominable cults. In any case we must try, for this Evil must be confronted and exposed for the good of America's future.

This epidemic of Satanic Ritual Abuse targets the most vulnerable among us, our children. Children are innocent and naïve, and can all too easily be taken advantage of. I have seen Satanic Ritual Abuse in day care centers and in high schools, and at every age in between.

Parents must be aware of the signs. A full understanding of what to look for can be gained by reading my book, Darkness Invisible: The Hidden Tide of Satanic Ritual Abuse in America Today (copies of which are still available at the book store at the Blood of the Lamb Worship Center). Some things to look for that may indicate your child is becoming involved in Satanic Cult activity:

- General discipline and behavior problems
- Uninterested in church or God
- Involvement with alcohol or drugs
- Withdrawn, moody
- Wears all black clothing or mostly so
- Has multiple piercings and/or tattoos
- Unhealthy obsession with rock music, especially "cult" bands
- Spends inordinate amount of time watching t.v. or playing on the computer

If parents learn to recognize these warning signs, they may prevent their little one from suffering the same awful fate that befell Stephanie Dempsey. It is time that the Christian people of America stood up and fought back against this Evil in our midst.
